Curating an exhibition

FullFrame help · Español · PDF

As a curator you prepare an exhibition in the studio and open it to the public when it's ready. Your exhibition is already set up for you: you only add people, photographs and words. Nothing goes public until you say so.

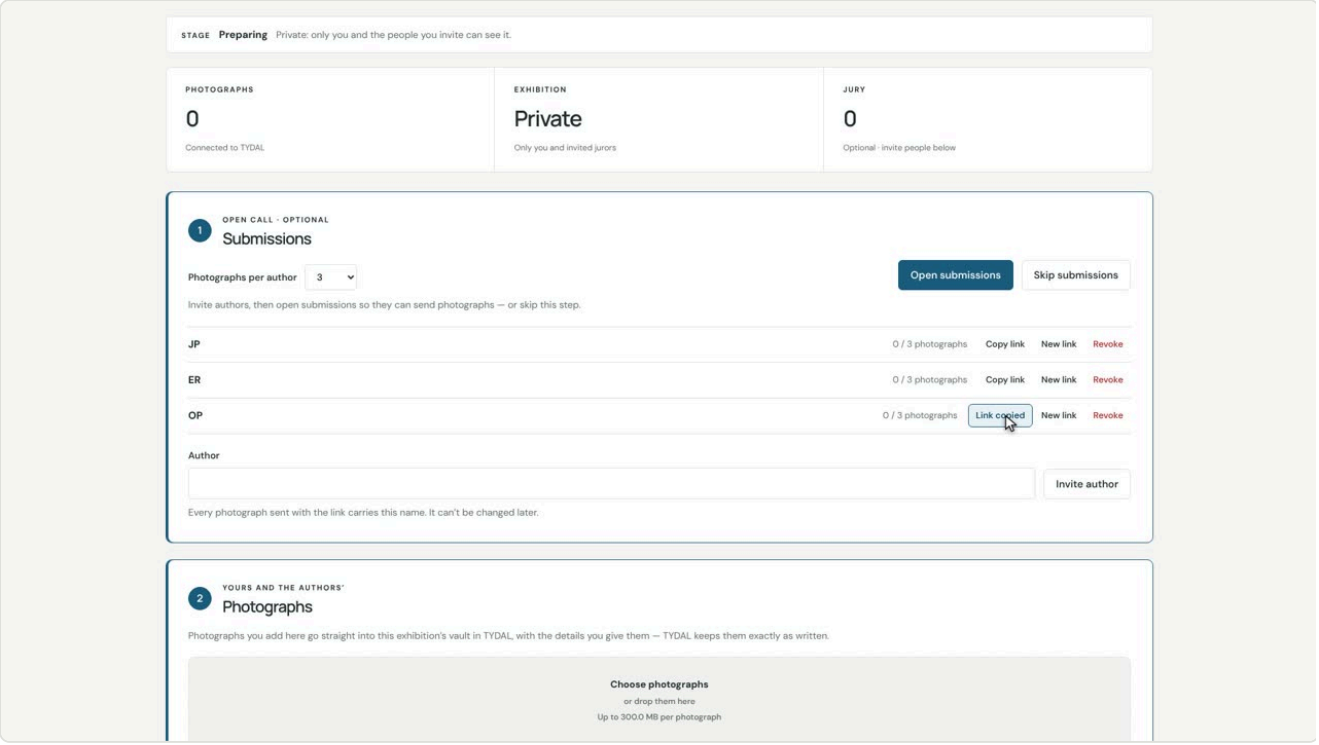

Watch: the whole process on Taming the Wind, in a minute and a half. Step by step (6 min).

Before you start

Go to the FullFrame home page and click Curator sign in. Use the email and password your organisation gave you. Find your exhibition and click Manage exhibition. You can switch the studio between English and Español at the top right.

1 · Invite the photographers

1. Choose how many photographs each person can send.
2. Type a photographer's name and click Invite author.
3. Click Copy link and send that link to the photographer by email or message. Each person gets their own link.
4. When everyone is invited, click Open submissions.

The photographers open their link, add their photographs with a title, and click Finish. They don't need an account. You'll see each one's progress, for example 2 / 3 photographs.

2 · Ask a jury for their opinion (optional)

1. When all the photographs are in, click Close submissions.
2. Type a juror's name, click Invite juror, then Copy link and send it to them.
3. Click Start judging.

Jurors open their link and give each photograph a score from 1 to 5. They can also write a private note that only you will read. Prefer to choose on your own? Click Skip the jury.

When the jurors are done, click Close judging.

3 · Choose and write

Open the Selection tab.

1. Write a one-line Introduction and a short text About this exhibition. Pick the Cover photograph. Click Save details.
2. Click the photographs you want to show; each one shows the jury's average score to help you. Click Save selection.

4 · Give it a look and open the doors

Open the Appearance & publish tab.

1. Pick a look: a light or dark room, the style of the titles and an accent colour. The preview shows your real photographs. Click Apply style.
2. Click Publish exhibition, then Publish now. Your exhibition is open to everyone.

Changing your mind later

- To fix a text (introduction, about text, cover): edit it on Selection and click Save details. The exhibition stays open.
- To add or remove photographs: click Close exhibition, then Back to preparing. Make your changes, go through the steps again (the jury only scores what's new) and publish once more. Nothing you did before is lost.

More detail

- Curating an exhibition: the complete technical guide on GitHub, including connecting an exhibition and its connection settings.
- For the people you invite: Sending your photographs and Being on a jury.